Program Note

Rhapsody was composed during the winter of 1997, while I was a Fulbright Fellow in Finland. It was written for, and in consultation with, cellist Audrey Mei who first performed it in a Finnish radio broadcast in May 1997. It is cast in a single movement and is a study of the progression of ideas, a concern with which I was obsessed at the time. At the same time, it explores the virtuosic and idiomatic possibilities of the violoncello. In fact, the very materials were derived from the instrument. I also took advantage of the special colors at which the violoncello excels, especially pizzicato, harmonics, multiple stops, and extreme registers.

* This section requires hammer-on/pull-off technique. Ascending notes should be struck with the left hand finger hard enough to sustain the sound. Descending notes should be plucked gently as the previous finger is removed from the string. In all cases, the notes initiating a slur should be louder or even with the following notes, and timber should be kept as consistent as possible.
